

DATA FOR PROGRESS

From August 6 to 11, 2021, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 823 likely voters in New York using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, and voting history. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error is ±3 percentage points.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=823 unless otherwise specified.

This report is filtered to respondents: NY

[14] Some New York State lawmakers are considering opening Overdose Prevention Centers. These centers offer sterile supplies and controlled settings for people to use pre-obtained drugs under the supervision of trained professionals who can intervene in case of an overdose or other medical event, and link people to counseling, and referrals to health and social services, including drug treatment.

Do you support or oppose opening Overdose Prevention Centers?

[16] The Climate and Community Investment Act (CCIA) is a bill that aims to address the climate crisis. The CCIA would impose a climate pollution fee on corporations that would generate an estimated $15 billion a year, and use the revenue from this fee to create green jobs, invest in frontline communities, and build our renewable energy economy.

No one can be truly free without a safe, stable place to live. Our state government should work for the people by making that a reality for every New Yorker. That means ending homelessness; investing in truly affordable housing; cracking down on predatory landlords; and getting rid of the lead that's poisoning our children.

Our economy should promote the common good. First and foremost, that means the economy needs to work for every New Yorker, no matter who they are, where they come from, or what they do. It also means good jobs with fair wages and worker protections; universal broadband access; support for small businesses; and making sure the wealthiest New Yorkers and corporations pay more in taxes.

Healthcare is a human right. Only when our health doesn't depend on our wealth can we truly be free. Our state government must make sure that every New Yorker can go to the doctor when they need to and fill their prescriptions every month. And we must recognize that full healthcare includes mental health services and treatment and prevention for substance use disorder and overdose.

Currently, the provision to reduce big money in politics and increase the power of small donations is at risk of being dropped from the bill in final negotiations.

When thinking about this, which statement comes closer to your views, even if neither is exactly right?

DATA FOR PROGRESS

From August 6 to 11, 2021, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 426 Democratic likely voters in New York using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, and voting history. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error is  $\pm 5$  percentage points.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=426 unless otherwise specified.
